Course Description
“Academics around the world share the same aims so working together should not be a problem...”
“If we speak the same language we can work with each other...”
“We live in a global village...”
Phrases we hear every day and have learnt to accept. However, why then does working internationally cause so many problems? Why is it so difficult to work with my German/Mexican/Chinese colleagues?

Target Audience, Number of Participants
Doctoral candidates of Mainz University who are either planning a stay abroad or who do already have experiences in intercultural settings i.e. throughout a research stay in another country or international teamwork. Foreign doctoral candidates are especially invited to apply.

Maximum number of Participants: 14 persons

Date, Time and Venue
Tuesday, February 27th, 2018, 10 a.m. - 6 p.m. and Wednesday, February 28th, 2018, 9 a.m. - 5 p.m., at SB II, room 05-432, Colonel-Kleinmann-Weg 2 (Campus)

Content
This two day seminar will start by exploring the different theoretical frameworks that define culture. We will then go on to apply the theoretical knowledge to practical situations in order to understand why difficulties arise, and, to analyse what is actually going on. Lastly, we will consider intercultural misunderstandings that can occur – often unknowingly –, and how conflict can be avoided. This seminar will adopt a ‘hands on’ approach through the use of case studies and participants’ experiences so be prepared to talk!

Course Objectives
Participants can anticipate and avoid intercultural misunderstandings.
